

U.S. citizens don't need a U.S. visa for travel, but when planning travel abroad, may need a visa issued by the embassy of the country they wish to visit. When planning travel abroad, it is helpful for prospective travelers to learn about visa requirements for the particular country they intend to visit.

A citizen of a foreign country who seeks to enter the United States, generally, must first obtain a U.S. visa, which is issued by the traveler's country of citizenship, and placed in the traveler's passport. Certain international travelers may be eligible to travel to the U.S. without a visa if they meet the requirements for visa-free travel.
